Friday, May 2, 2014To All CNU Employees and Faculty:

Yesterday we learned of the death of our co-worker, Charles Outterbridge. It was unexpected and very sad news about a friend and colleague. Too often in life we wait until a person we value is gone to let them know how they have affected the lives of those around them. Charles was the embodiment of someone who was far more than he appeared to be. He delivered the mail, and that is all that many people at CNU associated him with; yet his grace and dignity and example and many kindnesses to all who took the time to know him are really the measure of the man. He demonstrated in a most personal way the truth that every single one of our CNU employees and faculty has an importance that very often transcends the day to day work that they do.

To the family of Charles Outterbridge I offer my sincerest condolences.

Anthony Santoro
