Peggy Barlett, Goodrich C. White Professor of Anthropology at Emory University, specializes in agricultural anthropology and sustainability. She is coordinator of Emory's Sustainable Food Initiative, and has led workshops on curriculum development around the country. She is author of the award-winning American Dreams, Rural Realities: Family Farms in Crisis, a study of the U.S. farm crisis of the 1980s. Barlett serves on the National Research Council Board on Agriculture and Natural Resources. She earned a PhD in anthropology from Columbia University.
