Recently I learned that university employees, acting on their own initiative, removed copies of The Captain's Log from newspaper distribution stands. When a senior university official was notified of this action, he ordered that the newspapers be found and returned immediately.

This action was taken by young employees who love CNU and were concerned that a newspaper article would create a bad impression for visiting prospective students. Their actions were inappropriate and they will be disciplined in accordance with university procedures. The University will not comment further on these personnel matters.

The Captain's Log is free to write anything it pleases and CNU fully respects the freedom of the press. The University expressly condemns this conduct and these actions do not reflect the custom, policy or practice of the University.
