Why Europe Matters

By Doctor John McCormick

This is the second lecture in the European Lecture series about the present European Financial Crisis. This lecture will address the current climate of pessimism that surrounds the European Union. Dr. McCormick who is a Jean Monnet professor of European Politics at Indiana University at the Indianapolis campus will discuss the EU's place in the world, its meaning for Europeans, and how the EU might move forward once the current crisis has passed. Refreshments will be provided after the lecture.
