David J. Lorenzo is a professor in the College of International Affairs, National Chengchi University in Taipei, Taiwan, Republic of China. He received a Ph.D. in political science from Yale University and teaches a variety of courses in international relations, American government and political theory. His primary research is in the realm of political arguments, particularly the use of concepts and terms of discourse in the justification of policy positions involving political freedoms, foreign policy and democracy. He has published articles in such journals as Political Theory, History of Political Thought, the American Journal of Political Science and the American Journal of Chinese Studies. His most recent books are Conceptions of Chinese Democracy: Reading Sun Yat-sen, Chiang Kai-shek and Chiang Ching-kuo (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2013), and Cities at the End of the World: Using Utopian and Dystopian Stories to Reflect Critically on our Political Beliefs, Communities and Ways of Life (Bloomsbury Press, 2014). His most recent book is titled Debating War: Why Arguments Opposing American Wars and Interventions Fail (Routledge, 2015).

Sponsored by The Reiff Center for Human Rights and Conflict Resolution and the Department of Government
